Bonar Law Is Acting As British Prime Minister

CENTENARIAN WILL BE RULE RATHER THAN THE EXCEPTION, IS THE PROMISE OF SCIENCE

By Stephen M. Walter

Cleveland, O, Oct. 20—The child born this year is going to see 30 more years of life than the young men and women born in 1900.

Such is the gain made for the average child by Science, in the long battle of Man against Death, according to Dr. Emerson Haven Emerson, professor of public health administration at Columbia University.

That the threescore years and ten of scriptural life ideal will be extended through scientific methods, to fourscore or more, with life really only well begun at 50, is the prediction of Dr. Emerson. Furthermore, he expects this additional span of life to come within the lives of persons now living.

"The average length of mankind's stay on earth, right now, is but 55 years, says Dr. Emerson. "But by the time the baby born in 1922 has reached the age of 50, there remains little doubt but what the normal span of life will have been wodened to more than 75 years.

"In the last 20 years the average human life has been lengthened about eight years. In the last half century preceding, only seven years were added to man's lease of life."

How will Man stave off longer his eventful visitor?

It's simple, according to Dr. Emerson. He has put the recipe for longevity into a set of simple rules. But they must be continually kept in mind he says, if they are to be of value.

Anybody can live in excess of his alloted threescore years and ten if he has the WILL to stay healthy, continued Dr. Emerson. Any community or nation can become a society of ong livers if it wills to become so.

How to Live Long

By Dr. Emerson Haven Emerson

Professor of Public Health Administration, Columbia University

If you would live long, follow these rules at all times:

FIRST: Remember that eventually, one of the vital organs must wear out and death comes. The problem of longevity resolves itself into a fight to keep the vital organs from wearing out.

Thus far, we have no reason to believe that young organs can be transplanted into old bodies and prolong a well advanced life.

SECOND: Society must recognize its responsibility to itself.

Each community must employ a full-time, non-political, professional officer of public health, vested with much authority. His appointment and continuity should be based entirely on merit.

THIRD: In conjunction with the health officer, each community should maintain an adequate health department. Its functions are: Child hygiene and infant care, control of social diseases, proper maternity care, public health education and care of communicable diseases.

FOURTH: You must submit to a periodic health examination by your own physician.

FIFTH: You must learn to know yourself. If you hope to live long, you must study your diet, eat the things that agree with your digestive system.

Follow your doctor's advice on nutrition, rest, exercise, cleanliness and occupation.

Judge Bosworth on Committee to Go to Frankfort and Show Why Assessments Should Not Be Raised.

DELEGATES GO FROM VARIOUS COAL FIELDS IN STATE

Delegates from the Southern Appalachian Coal Operators' Association will meet with the State Tax Commission November 6 to investigate the matter of coal land taxation and show reason why the assessment of this section should not be raised. Agitation by the Louisville newspapers and other agencies to the effect that this section is not paying enough taxes has led to the appropriation of $20,000 by the state government to investigate the coal land assessments of the various counties affected.

The committee from the Southern Appalachian Coal Operators' Association are: R. E. Howe, the association's secretary, delegate at large; A. E. Denton of Stearns, from Pulaski and McCreary counties; Senator J. F. Bosworth of Middlesboro from Bell county; N. B. Perkins of Williamsburg from Whitley county; and J. H. Martin of Cincinnati from Knox county. The Harlan, Hazard and Northeastern Kentucky fields have also appointed committees to confer with the State Tax Commission in regard to this matter. E. R. Clayton will go from Harlan.

The commission seeks to cooperate with the coal operators of the state in reaching an equitable adjustment of taxes in Kentucky and for this reason the committees will be carefully consulted.

"SOME REASONS WHY" EVANGELIST'S SUBJECT LAST NIGHT

Last nihgt Evangelist Clarke spoke on "Some Reasons Why" a man should be a Christian. After defining a Christian as a man measuring up to the highest possibilities of his manhood, he made three arguments. The first was that a man should be a Christian because God commanded it; second, because humanity requires it; and, third, our conscience demands it.

Under his second division, Mr. Clarke said if a man was sick from any contagious disease society demanded that he go in quarantine, and as sin was a disease that was contagious he owed it to societ yto become a Christian to keep from contaminating others. He also made the argument that a man could not be true to his marriage vows and not bring to his wife the best. If he did not supply her with spiritual help she was a widow to that extent that she was being deprived of something that he had promised when he married her.

There was special music last night by a trio who sang "The Old Rugged Cross."

Miss Elliott sang as solo, "O Dry Those Tears." The subject for toniht is "The Outstretched Hand," and the solo, 'I Walk with the King."

FORMATION OF NEW CABINET IS PROGRESSING

Law, Mere Than Any One Else, Influenced Coalition Succession Which Resulted in Lloyd George's Defeat.

EARL OF DERBY AND MARQUIS CURZON SUPPORT LAW

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Andrew Bonar Law appeared to be making rapid progress today in forming a cabinet to replace the fallen coalition government. The Earl of Derby and Marquis Curson have agreed to serve under him in any capacity.

It was Bonar Law, more than any other man, who influenced the Unionist caucus to secede from the coalition. He had been a sphinx whom the rank and file of the unionist commoners were waiting to hear. He is a serious and unemotional man with a quiet manner. His opinion that it was more important to keep the party together than to win the next election and "whether by his own fault or the force of circumstances, Mr. Lloyd George has lost the confidence of the country," decided many votes. There was also a strong feeling in the party that the Chamberlain plan, which gave the party's destiny over to the small faction representing it in parliament, was not a fair device.

SALTED MIXED NUTS

By Bertha E. Shapleigh
Of Columbia University

1 cup Jordan almonds
1 2 cup pecan meats
1-2 cup English walnuts

Blanch the almonds by pouring boiling water over the nuts, cooking for one minute and plunging them into cold water

The skins then slip off easily. Do not allow nuts to stand in the water. Dry thoroughly. Do the same with the English walnuts but the pecans do not require it.

Cook the nuts, a few at a time, in hot oil either corn or olive, about two or three minutes, keeping them constantly stirred

Drain on paper, remove to a second piece of paper and sprinkle with salt.

Separate Furs

A number of neck scarfs and separate fur pieces have been brought out since the days began to grow cooler The most popular furs seem to be sable, kolinsky, fox, mink and ermine.

Youthful Hats

Youthful hats, trimmed with pompoms or bows of soft satin ribbon, are featured by some of the most exclusive milliners A black velvet hat has a bow of pink satin and black lace falling over the train

Collars: With Their Aid You Can Make Old Frocks New

One way to refurbish one of last season's frocks is to add one of the new wide collars now so fashionable

Those of net or georgette crepe, trimmed with hemstitching and a lace edging, may be made very inexpensively at home and they give the same effect of the expensive ones you buy in the shops.

It seems only fair to give this word of warning: if you have very broad shoulders such a collar will emphasize the fact. Only the young and slender should attempt this extreme style

Five O'clock Magic Hour For Modes This Season

At this time of the year it's 5 o'clock that's the witching hour for women. Gathering in the smart hotels and tea-shops one may see all the newest styles for fall in all the newest fabrics and trimmings.

Chiffon is very good just now, accordion pleated or embroidered and beaded. Chiffon velvet is extremely smart, especially if it be embroidered in silver.

Laces of all kinds are worn. Other frocks of crepe Roma or similar stuffs are quite tailored with only a jeweled buckle at the waist for ornament.

Brown is the color oftenest seen and frequently in combination with tan. Among the velvets black is the preferred shade and many navy blues are worn

Great emphasis is being put on the careful matching of colors for a costume, shoes, hat, gloves and stockings as well as jewelry must match or harmonize.

Picturesque Styles

A black velvet suit is handed with mole and has wide ruffles ruffles of lace finishing the long, tight sleeves and falling over the hands. It is one of the season's most picturesque styles

Pleasant's Costume

A peasant's costume formed the inspiration for a youthful frock composed of a black velvet bodice and a skirt of black, red and white striped wool. The bodice laces with a black cord.

Way to Slenderness

The slender silhouette is achieved by a number of ways this season, but no way is more popular than the long side panels which cut the breadth about the hips and give a graceful hemline.

Novel Buckles

Buckles for pumps increase in size as the season advances. Frequently shirring of ribbon are used to frame the buckle, particularly in very fancy models.

HONEYMOONERS ABROAD

John and Edna Get Their First Glimpse of Europe

BY ZOE BECKLEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Were business secrets going to wreck the perfect confidence on which JOHN DURYEA and his bride, EDNA, had built their happiness? Edna fears this when she learned her husband has been entrusted with a delicate and confidential mission by his employers Enroute to Europe, John tells her the secret. He has been ordered to investigate the suspicious actions of the firm's European manager,

COUSINS. Edna plans to assist her husband in the discovery of business intrigue.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

There was no more sleep that night for the Duryeas They dressed in their landing clothes and went on deck to see th dawn break upon their first sight of Europe.

The velvet Italian night, its glitter softened to a delicate lilac, took on the pastel colors of a lovely dawn. There against the skyline ahead was a graceful tapering peak, a cloudy plume at its crest.

"Why, it's Mount Vesuvius!" cried Edna. "Think of recognizing the old dear from his pictures! Naughty old creature that destroyed Pompeii and Herculaneum.

"And look, the city, the Bay of Naples, and way out there, that shadowy thing, what is it? Capri? Oh, Jack, how lovely, how marvelous for us to be seeing it all together like this!"

Jack caught something of her excitement.

"Hope we don't die of it, Eds. There is a saying, you know; See Naples and die.' Some slogan for a town to adopt."

Edna felt a little pang of displeasure.

"Oh, Jack, that's what a poet said of Naples, so beautiful that after seeing it there was nothing left to live for. Just a bit of beautiful exaggeration. Can't you feel a little of it with him?"

"Divvie a bit!" laughed Jack cheerfully. "Haven't got a nickel's worth of poet in me. You'll have to put up with a plain, though handsome, business man."

She seized and shook him

"No such thing, Jack Duryea. You wrote the class song at college. You can be a poet if you want to. I've got letters from you that are, well, literature' You only choose to put on this hardware salesman air"

"More money in it."

"There'll be both money and poetry in this family, Jack Duryea." Edna's voice was as determined as it was gay. "And on this trip, old Mister Business Man, poetry's to be the order of the day!"

But Jack was hardly listening. He was staring at the revenue cutter approaching them He raised his glasses.

"By Jimmy, Ed, if it isn't old Cousins come to meet us. Thought he was in gay Paree Well, if that isn't being friendly."

Edna grabbed good-humoredly for the binoculars.

She saw a brisk, corpulent, well-dressed man with the short beard of the modern Frenchman of affairs.

The powerful glasses brought the face close to her. She saw him scanning the rail of the Roma eagerly.

But there seemed in his expression much more the look of being on guard than of the pleasant tension of waiting welcome.

PORK CAKE

By Bertha E. Shapleigh
of Columbia University

This is a cake which used to be very popular. It keeps indefinitely, and is a good cake for the housekeepers to make, if they have good pork. This recipe makes three medium-sized loaves:

2 cups finely chopped clear fat pork
1 1-2 cups boiling water
1 cup seeded raisins
1 cup currants
1-2 pound citron
2 cups sugar
1 cup molasses
6 cups flour
1 tablespoon soda
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon cloves

Pour boiling water over the pork and let stand until cool. Then add sugar, molasses and fruit. Mix flour with soda and spices, and beat thoroughly into the other mixture. Bake two hours slowly.

Ask for "Jack Frost" Salt.

For Evening

Gowns of gold and silver cloth and tissue cloths in shades of lavender and blue are frequently embellished with intricate patterns in small beads. Crinkled fabrics are also being treated this way.

AUTOSUGGESTION--- IT'S NEW CURE-ALL

New York, Oct. 20—It's simply impossible to find spare string around the house these days.

Mother, father, auntie, grandma, grandpa and the girls have it all cut up into convenient lengths and tied in twenty knots

This is one of Emile Cole's first essentials of Self-Mastery Through Conscious Autosuggestion.

Fust catch your string then knot it Sounds like a string game but it really is not

The knots are all in the string, 20 of 'em, count 'em. That is just what you do, too, count them every one, repeating a little wheeze at every knot.

Sort of like He loves me, He loves me knot, you know, only the Coue formula runs like this—Day by day, in every way I am getting better and better

When you have told yourself this 20 times, once for every knot, night and morning, with eyes shut and lips moving, you will either be cured of all

YOUR UNCONSCIOUS SELF
YOUR IMAGINATION
YOU
WE ARE ABSOLUTELY RUN AND ORDERED ABOUT BY OUR UNCONSCIOUS SELF AND RULED BY OUR IMAGINATION

your physical and mental ills or else you will be sent to the psychopatic ward.

Professor Coue doesn't specify if the knots in the string are to be sailor knots, bow knots or love knots, but possibly this is a mere detail.

According to this newest French exponent of autosuggestion, who has himself cured hundreds of seemingly hopeless cases we are absolutely run and ordered about and domineered by our unconscious self and ruled by our imagination

You may think your conscious self has all the say-so, but you are wrong. According to Coue, in an argument between the will and the imagination the imagination wins out every time.

Therefore it is up to you to master this unconscious self and to put down this boss imagination.

If you just prove you are master they will take your suggestions very docily and carry out your every command.

For instance, since the unconscious has control of all your organs, if something goes wrong with a kidney or heart all you need do is to speak gently but firmly to your unconscious self somewhat in this manner: Look here, old chap that organ is quite all right you know.

Just persist and reiterate this and the unconscious will finally accept the statement as a fact and the organ will at once begin functioning normally. Simple, isn't it?

Also the very next time you have a jumping toothache or an attack of acute indigestion just retire to a secluded spot, close the eyes, place the hand gently on the afflicted spot and repeat gently on typemfwypshrdlnemf repeat gently and soothingly, but convincingly: Going, going, going, and see what happens.

Professor Coue's method for raising perfect children is also succinct and simple. When little Percy cuts a hole out of one of your best sheets for a Hallowe'en costume don't wallop the child.

At night when he is sound asleep in his little bed approach softly to within a yard without waking him and murmur 15 or 20 times the things you wish to reform in him as to health and conduct.

Exit then softly as you have entered. Though the child is sleeping, body and conscious self, his unconscious self is wide awake and taking it all in.

Consequently it will accept what you say and little Percy will not only leave the sheets alone but will grow up a paragon.

There are many other illustrations of Professor Coue's autosuggestive methods, but Day by Day in every way it is getting better and better, not to string stories out too long.

Dr. Patterson Writes of His Work With Lepers

That the cure of leprosy, "that great scourage of the east" may in years to come become an accomplished thing, due in part to the missionary efforts of the members of the First Presbyterian church of Middlesboro, is the wonderful news contained in a letter from Dr. J B Patterson, of Kunsan, Korea, Asia, who with his wife is in charge of the Presbyterian hospital at that place, and who is supported by funds sent him by the Middlesboro church.

Several years ago, the members of the local church decided to support a missionary in Korea, and they decided upon Dr. and Mrs. Patterson. Dr. Patterson was in Middlesboro and spoke at the church before going abroad and the enthusiasm generated at that time has remained at its highest point. The church eagerly awaits word from this wonderful man from time to time, and his letters are always full of things accomplished

The following letter was received by Dr Johnson Archer Gray, minister of the church, recently, and will be read with pleasure by a great number of interested people:

Dr Johnson Archer Gray.

Middlesboro, K., U. S A.

Dear Dr. Gray:

Mrs. Patterson and I appreciated seeing our names on the Calendar we received at Christmas time. The whole family were very grateful for the nice things sent us at that time Maybe you would like to know something of the very interesting work that you and your people are doing out here

I would like to take each one of you down around the hospital grounds on the cement walks and through the halls into the operating room, and laboratory and X-ray and dark room, into the engine room and laundry and kitchen. I'd like to show you the isolation wards and the room set aside for little babies that have no other home. The buildings are all one story affairs and not very permanent in character but there are enough of them for ninety or even a hundred patients if crowded enough. There are all classes, some rich but as you would expect, most of them are poor. There are a good many Japanese but always most of them are Korean

You would want to see the crowd that comes to the clinic which begins about eleven o'clock and usually lasts till after six. All sorts of cases come here. Lepers are halted at the big gate and are seen as soon as possible and taken inside for their hypo and after their treatment they get their medicine and are allowed to go with less loss of time than the manager of the government bank. We are using the Ethyl-ester of cholmugra oil by hypodermic Remarkable improvement is seen

Then you will see some dirty fellows that are not allowed in the waiting room. These also are treated outside or sent to a ward if they need ward treatment. Inside are most all sorts and conditions. Sometimes there will be a Buddist priest Some of these have been converted, too.

Yesterday we had some excitement on account of a poor fellow falling or jumping into the village well. Most of the people thing he was trying to drown. The poor fellow waylaid me on my rounds day after day for some days asking for an operation. He cried and begged and as he seemed to be troubling from ulcer caused probably by hook-worm I thought we ought to give him a chance. So we operated and found what we thought we would and made him a perfectly new connection between his stomach and small intestines. Sewed him up and put him back in the ward where surgical cases are supposed to get the best watching. The next time I saw him he had torn the bandage off and tried to get the sutures out too Then on the morning of the fifth day he got out and jumped into the well. The sutures are still holding and he seems to be doing finely except he is howling for his clothes and wants to go home. I know we have put an end to his stomach trouble but there is more than that Could this be a case of demon possession, I am wondering. He has wonderful strength as you can imagine from what I have intimated, but not so much that we cannot tie him.

I have never seen any miracle of healing as are often reported here and probably elsewhere. Such as was done by Jesus Do not misunderstand me. I know the Lord and his apostles did miracles I expect to see them again sometime But so far I have seen none. I think it may be they only accompany revelation. There is another thing that I feel like saying: it seems to me that often times my work is wonderfully blessed Ordinarily I think cases get well here that would die if it were not the blessing of the Lord on the work done

Well, I got a good way off the main subject. You will be glad to know that there are three doctors who assist me and several helpers who do all the dressing, intravenous injections, laboratory work as well as the dark room. Some of these boys after spending several years with me as helpers have gone out and are doing a fine independent work. Just recently I lost my head druggist. When a man like that leaves he can make much more money than we are able to pay so if they get a going mind there is nothing to do but train a substitute This time I have selected a one legged man for that responsible place. Surely he cannot run off so easily. He came here after an accident at a grading camp His leg was cut off by the doctor giving an anesthetic and there was not enough skin to cover up the bone. So it had to be done again. This young boy before gate-keeper and was promoted from one thing to another till he is the Japanese interpreter now and spends the mornings working in the drugroom preparatory to taking over that position. All he knows was learned at the night school at the hospital. I could tell you more of this study young fellow, of his faith, of his young wife and you would share with me the pride I have in him Some of these days he will be one of the assistants He is already a good dresser, and anesthetist.

I want you to thank the good people of your church for their generous support I wish each one might see what they are having a part in doing I pray the Lord to bless you and your people in bearing witness for Him in Middlesboro.

Sincerely yours.

J. B. PATTERSON.

A THOUGHT

Wait on the Lord; be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart. Wait, I say, on the Lord.—Psalm 27:14.

We never know for what God is preparing us in his school, for what great work on earth, for what work in the hereafter. Our business is to do our work well in th present place, whatever that may be.—Lyman Abbott.

SUPPORT THE FOOTBALL TEAM

Football, as well as high school athletics in general, is a matter that requires the education of the public as well as the player No team can be a successful one unless it has the moral support of the community behind it and unless it believes in itself, and the chief reason our team has not been a success in the past is that the patrons of the school have refused to take athletics seriously.

The modern educator recognizes that physical education, especially in the form of athletics, is every bit as potent a factor in the development of the child as mental and moral education. Courage and a sound body, the characteristics football and basketball serve to develop, are the foundations of right living. Education no more means the cramming of the child's mind and neglecting every thing else. It is tending more and more to balanced training, fitting the child for a well rounded and sane life.

This is the first year we have made a definite stand for football and although the game last Saturday resulted disastrously, the team's record is nothing to be ashamed of. There is no reason to believe that, when our boys are matched against teams more their equal, they will not show up proudly. But they will not be victorious and they will not give their best if they become discouraged and feel that the town does not believe in them. "Keeping up the soldier's morale" was the big cry during the war and the same thing applies to the football player

Morristown High School is coming here tomorrow. They are reputed to have a good team, but our boys are ready to meet them Let us back our team, go out to see the game, and root for the M. H. S boys with all of our might to show them that we whole heartedly believe in them. Then, if we feel that they are not honestly playing the game, we may consider our right to criticise them.

THREE KEYS

Russell Everett Smith was kidnapped by gypsies in April, 1919 when he was four years old

Now he is returned to his mother in La Grange Me., thanks to information furnished by a wandering peddler.

The reunion brings great rejoicing, shouts cheers, celebrations, tears, excitement. Wild explosions of rage among the neighbors, when Smith told of the cruelty he experienced

All this has the makings of a heart-throb book. It is a perfect type of emotional news.

From emotional news you turn to another type of happenings in this life—intellectual news, brought to its highest degree in scientific research.

Dr. Aston, celebrated British scientist, discusses his conviction that man is made entirely of electricity. This is the Rutherford doctrine, that the atoms of matter are merely different combinations of electricity.

Dr. Ashton predicts a day when man will unlock the gigantic power stored in the atom to make it do his work.

How small is an atom? Aston says: If a tiny hole were made in the side of an evacuated electric light bulb so that the molecules of air could pass in at the rate of 1,000,000 a second, it would take 100,000,000 years before the bulb was full and there are two atoms in each molecule of air."

From emotional and intellectual news you turn to something harder to define. A good name for it would be Controversial happenings A sample.

Prohibition has cost America a loss of $1,702,000,000 since 1919, in revenue that might have been derived from the sale of liquor if the saloons had been left wide open. The estimate is made in the Wall Street Journal.

Controversial? Decidedly Wets will point to what the government has lost! Drys will point to what the drinkers have saved

Emotions, intellect and controversy, these are the three great forces that animate men and women, whether in barbarism or civilization Usually they work in combinations

Men come and go, from the dust back to the dust, but the three forces seem perpetual Which of the three are futile?

SMALL TOWN "SHOWS"

Not upon Broadway, New York, or in Louisville and other cities of its class, are found the worst of public entertainments, the worst morally

The Carnivals which go from one small city or town to another are described by a contributor to The American City, as being a far greater evil than public entertainments of the most objectionable class in large cities.

These "marauders," as the writer terms them, operate gambling devices controlled electrically in the interest of the operator and sell children lemonade, made of citric acid, red dye and dirty water, in which thousands of lips touch the slice of lemon that is used over and over again till worn out.

In addition to fleecing the general attendance and subjecting the children to grossly insanitary conditions, the carnivals maintain organized prostitution in connection with Living Pictures, Dancing Mermaids, Oriental Dancing, and The Hawaiian Hoola Hoola, performances in themselves too often are too obscene to be described in matter passing through the United States mail.

The carnival problem is one of public health, and not one of the moral health of communities merely. According to The American City, these traveling shows have in the smaller American centers of population an aggregate attendance of more than 18,000,000 annually and until public sentiment has been aroused to the many evils that result from their existence prohibitory legislation will not be enacted by State Legislatures

Will prohibitory legislation ever be enacted? Would it be valid, and, if valid, would it be defensible?

It is easily within the power of any town or city to regulate public entertainments for the prevention of such practices as The American City describes. If local public opinion in the smaller cities were sufficiently opposed to them they could be handled effectively.

Where the smaller town show is as vile as is described by The American City its vileness reflects equal vileness in small-town politics and government.

A few small towns have proceeded informally and perhaps illegally, to require of strolling players appearance before a health officer to determine whether they should be quarantined. But that progressive measure suggests connivance at commercial vice as one of the enterprises in which carnival managers engage.

The carnivals and kindred shows should be regulated by municipalities, not prohibited by States through laws which, inevitably, would prohibit the harmless performances along with the harmful ones.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BERTON BRALEY'S DAILY POEM

HERE HE IS!

By Berton Braley

JIM'S got back! An' who is Jim?
Goodness gracious, ain't you heard of him?
He's the guy with the laughin' mouth,
An' the fund of tales from the north an' south.
An' the stock of stories from the east an' west
That'll pop th buttons off your fancy vest,
An' he's come home from the rovers' track—
Jim's got back!

JIM'S got back—an' the old men say
"That there Jim's got a tongue that's gay,
An' he sure is one amusin' cuss
When he sets around with a bunch like us,"
An' the youngsters grin, an' the old maids smile,
An' the matrons fall for his bold-faced guile;
Oh, with women folks he has got a knack—
Jim's come back!

JIM'S got back! An' who is Jim?
Well, he ain't so much when you study him
Kind of gypsy an' kind of tramp.
Two-thirds blarney an' four-fifths scamp,
Lazy rascal with the travelin' itch,
A maverick that you just can't hitch
But Lord, who cares When he lands in town,
With his crooked smile an' his face all brown

WITH his joyous charm an' his lovin' vim,
Everybody greets him with a "Hi there, Jim!"
An' they lend their money to the care-free sinner,
An' they drag him home to the house for dinner;
For he brings a savor that their calm lives lack—
Jim's got back!

Geisha

The notorious geisha girl system of Japan is destroyed by the Japanese courts Hereafter it will be unlawful for parents to sell their daughters into geisha girl slavery against their will.

The immediate effect of this decision by the judges is to free possibly half a million Japanese girls from bondage It shatters a system thousands of years old.

Democracy is rising on the other side of the Pacific and when Japan makes a contribution this important to the world-wide emancipation of the woman

Botulism

Scientists discover that heat destroys the germs of the dread food poisoning known as botulism. Canners will prevent any danger of botulism by heating food, before it goes into cans, for the time and degree of heat that has been scientifically determined

Not as important as it looks, however for botulism kills only twenty-five Americans a year, possibly not as many as choke to death by swallowing their false teeth.

The important angle, worth remembering, is that heat kills all the germs.

Styles

France is alarmed by the discovery that her exports of dressmaking materials such as lees and embroideries are a half million francs a year less than before the war.

All around French styles, are losing ground. Parisian designers seem to have lost their famed knack of keeping a finger on the world's fashion pulse.

It is part of the growing independence of women. Each year they are less inclined to accept whatever is dictated by style leaders, whether they like it or not.

Smoking

Dr. Knight Dunlap and other noted medical men at Johns Hopkins University, after three years of research, report that the immediate effect of smoking tobacco is a lowering of the accuracy of finely coordinated reaction but that there is no indication that the speed of complicated reactions is affected.

This makes it look as if tobacco has more effect on the dictionary than on the smokers It means that smoking apparently does not lower the efficiency of a routine worker, but is apt to befuddle men engaged in intellectual work.

Turkish

Lloyd George, under fire for his handling of the Turkish situation, is attacked by his political opponents on many points, chief of which is this:

England's army of occupation in Constantinople and Asia Minor during the last three years has cost the British Empire half a billion dollars.

It will interest Americans, this is 10 times as much as that first interest payment on what Britain owes us. Sooner or later, all these international problems get down to a money basis.

A device that gives the movies the third dimension, depth, like the old-fashioned stereoscope, is invented by young Lawrence Hammond.

Such an invention perfected, would make the movies as real and as natural as the stage, instead of a shadowland with only two dimensions. However, the fascination of the movies may be largely in the illusion created by the absence of a third dimension. Time will tell, for a perfected device such as claimed by Hammond is inevitable.

The Flaming Jewel

By Robert W. Chambers

Copyright 1922 by George H. Doran Company

BEGIN HERE TODAY

In his hunting camp in the Adirondacks,

MIKE CLINCH, rum runner and law breaker in general, is hoarding the Flaming Jewel, that priceless gem first stolen from the

COUNTESS OF ESTHONIA by the international thief,

QUINTANA, and stolen from Quintana by Clinch.

Quintana has returned to gain possession of the jewel which Clinch passionately holds as the means of "making a lady" of his beautiful stepdaughter,

EVE STRAYER.

JAMES DARRAGH, under the name of

HAL SMITH, is at Clinch's camp seeking to gain possession of the gem and restore it to the beggared countess

Eve is captured by Quintana, savagely treated, but escapes to the hunting camp at Star Pond Here with

STATE TROOPER STORMONT, she awaits the return of Clinch and his men who have gone out to clean up Quintana's gang

Clinch discovers that one of his men, EARL LEVERETT, has gone over to Quintana Leverett escapes in a hail of bullets from Clinch's rifle.

CHAPTER III.

For its size there is no fiercer animal than the rat.

Rat-like rage possessed Leverett. In his headlong flight through the dusk, fear, instead of quenching, added to his rage, and he ran on and on, crashing through the undergrowth, made wilder by the pain of vicious blows from branches which flew back and struck him in the dark.

Thorns bled him; unseen logs tripped him; he heard Clinch's bullets whining around him; and he ran on, beginning to sob and curse in a frenzy of fury, fear, and shame

Shots from Clinch's rifle ceased; the fugitive dropped into a heavy, shuffling walk, slavering, gasping, gesticulating with his weaponless fists in the darkness

"Gol ram ye, I'll fix ye!" he kept stammering in his snarling, jangling voice, broken by sobs "I'll learn ye, yeh poor danged thing, gol ram ye—"

To his own shack on Stinking Lake he dared not go. He tried to believe that it was fear of Clinch that made him shy of the home shanty; but in his cowering soul, he knew it was fear of another kind—the deep superstitious horror of Jake Kloon's empty trunk—the repugnant sight of Kloon's spare clothing hanging from its peg—the dead man's shoes—

All at once he thought of Clinch's step-daughter. The thought instantly scared him Yet—what a revenge!—to strike Clinch through the only creature he cared for in all the world! * * * What a revenge! * * * Clinch was headed for Drowned Valley. Eve Strayer was alone at the Dump * * * Another thought flashed like lightning across his turbid mind—the packet!

Bribed by Quintana, Jake Kloon, lurking at Clinchs door, had heard him direct Eve to take a packet to Owl Marsh, and had notified Quintana

Wittingly or unwittingly, the girl had taken a packet of sugar-milk chocolate instead of the priceless parcel expected

Again, carried in, exhausted, by a State Trooper, Jake Kloon had been fooled; and it was the packet of sugar milk chocolate that Jake had purloined from the veranda where Clinch kicked it. For two cakes of chocolate Kloon had died. For two cakes of chocolate he, Earl Leverett, had become a man slayer, a homeless fugitive in peril of his life

Somewhere in Clinch's Dump was the packet that would make him rich * * * Here was his opportunity. He had only to dare; and pain and poverty and fear—above all else, fear—would end forever. * * *

When at last he came out to the edge of Clinch's clearing, the dark October heavens were but a vast wilderness of stars.

The light burned steadily from Eve's window.

CHAPTER IV

From his hiding place among frost-blackened ragweeds, the trap-robber could see only the plastered ceiling of the bed chamber.

But the kerosene lamp cast two shadows on that—tall shadows of human shapes that stirred at times.

The shadows on the ceiling were cast by Eve Strayer and her State Trooper.

Eve sat on her bed's edge, swathed in a lilac kimona, delicate relic of school days. Her bandaged feet, were crossed and dangling above the rag-rug on the floor; her slim, tanned fingers were interlaced over the book on her lap

Near the door stood Trooper Stormont, spurred, booted, trip and trim, an undecided and flushed young man, fumbling irresolutely with the purple cord on his campaign hat.

She looked up at him again, wistfully. Perhaps he was restless, bored, sitting there beside her half the day, and, already, half the night Men of that kind, active, nervous young men accustomed to the open can't stand caging

'I want you to go out and get some fresh air", she said. "It's a wonderful night. Go and walk a while. And if you feel like coming back to me—"

"Will you sleep?"

'No, I'll wait for you"

Her words were natural and direct but in their simplicity ythere seemed a delicate sweetness that stirred him.

"I'll come back to you," he said. Then, in his response, the girl in turn became aware of something beside the simple words, a vague charm about them that faintly haunted her after he had gone away down the stairs.

That was the man she had once tried to kill. At the sudden and terrible recollection she shivered from curley head to bandaged feet— Then she trembled a little with the memory of her lips against bruised hands, bruised by handcuffs which he had fastened upon her.

She sat very, very still now, huddled on the bed's edge, scarcely breathing.

For the girl was beginning to dare formulate the deepest of any thoughts that ever had stirred her virgin mind and body.

If it was love, then it had come suddenly and strangely. It had come on that day, at the very moment when he flung her against the tree and had handcuffed her against the tree—that terrible instant, if it were love.

Listening there where she sat, clasping the book, she heard his steady tread patrolling the veranda; caught the fragrance of his brier pipe in the still night air.

"I think, I think it's love," she said under her breath. "But he couldn't ever think of me" always listening to his spurred tread below.

After a while she placed both bandaged feet on the rug. It hurt her, but she stood up, walked to the open window. She wanted to look at him, just a moment.

By chance he looked up at that instant and saw her pale, face like a flower in the starlight.

"Why Eve," he said, "you ought not to be on your feet."

"Once," she said, "you weren't so particular about my bruises"

Her breathless little voice coming down through the starlight thrilled him.

"Do you remember what I did?" he asked.

"Yes. You bruised my hands and made by mouth bleed."

"I did pennance for your hands."

"Yes, you kissed them!"

What possessed her, what irresponsible exhilaration was inciting her to a daring utterly foreign to her nature? She heard herself laugh, knew that she was young, pretty, capable of provocation. And in a sudden breathless sort of way an overwhelming desire seized her to please, to charm,-to-be noticed by such a man, whatever on afterthought, he might think of the stepchild of Mike Clinch.

Stormont had come directly under her window and stood looking up.

"I dared not offer further penance," he said.

The emotion in his voice stirred her but she was still laughing down at him.

She said: "You did offer further pennance, you offered your handkerchief. So, as that was all you offered, as reparation for my lips."

"Then I'm coming up to complete my pennance."

"I'll lock my door."

"Would you?"

"I ought to, but if you are in great spiritual distress, and if you really and truly repent, and if you humbly desire to expiate your sin by doing pennance" And resitated: "Do you so desire?"

"Yes, I do."

"Humbly? Contritely?"

"Yes."

She strove to laugh, gazing down into his shadowy face, but suddenly the desire left her, too suddenly, leaving only a still excitement in her breast.

"You—you knew I was just laughing" she said unsteadily, "You understand, didn't you?"

"I don't know."

After a silence: "I didn't mean you to take me seriously," she said. She tried to laugh It was no use. And as she leaned there on the sill, her heart frightened her with its loud beating.

"Will you let me come up, Eve?"

No answer.

'Would you lock your door?"

"What do you think I'd do?" she asked tremulously

"You know; I don't"

'Are you so sure I know what I'd do? I don't think either of us know our own minds. I seem to have lost some of my wits. Somehow."

"If you are not going to sleep let me come up."

"I want you to take a walk down by the pond And while you are there walking all by yourself, I wont you to think very clearly, very calmly, and make up your mind whether I should remain awake tonight, or whether when you return, I ought to be asleep and, and my door bolted"

After a long pause: "All right," he said in a low voice.

Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

PROHIBITION MEETS TEST IN COMING ELECTIONS

National prohibition is facing the test.

Throughout the United States there is in progress the most serious attack ever made against the Volstead act. The results will be known when the votes are polled in the November election.

The challenge was bound to come sooner or later. The outcome will give the first definite register of the will of the majority.

If prohibition adherents are in the majority, as the Anti-Saloon League insists they are, they will be vindicated of the charge of slipping something over when the majority had its back turned. If the wets are triumphant, the fight will not slacken until the Volstead act is modified and perhaps the eighteenth amendment repealed.

Modification of the Volstead act through raising the legal alcoholic content of beverages to 4 per cent is the wets' aim. They seek to do this through election of sufficient antidry congressmen.

This drive on congressmen is widespread. In practically all of the various states electing lawmakers this fall the question of prohibition is receiving consideration. The old political parties have vainly tried to shove the liquor question into the background, but in many states it refuses to stay put.

For the first time since it began the long battle that eventually ousted saloons, the Anti-Saloon League is on the defensive this year. The wet forces are solidified in the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, and have even carried the fight into the birthplace of the Anti-Saloon League and Women's Christian Temperance Union—Ohio.

Ohio voters will ballot this year on the initiative measure making the legal alcoholic content of beverages 2 3-4 per cent, permitting use of intoxicants in the home and making more stringent the search and seizure features of the state dry law.

The Ohio Senatorial and Congressional races are also affected by the issue. Twelve members of both political parties seek Congressional posts on wet platforms. Senator Pomerene, said to favor modified prohibition, is running against Congressman Simeon D. Fess, a pronounced dry.

Illinois will vote on a similar liquor measure, which the wets declare certain of passage. Massachusetts, likewise, considers a state law legalizing beer and light wines.

Enactment of the measures in Illinois and Massachusetts is said to be assured, with Ohio bound to be close. Both sides claim the Buckeye State.

Strong campaigns have been waged by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment in these states. The Anti-Saloon League is said to have made its campaign largely through the churches in the cities and through its strong followings in the rural districts.

Openly the Anti-Saloon League is inclined to scoff at the campaign in the three states. It holds foolish plans to change a state law so it will conflict with the national constitution.

This is just the beginning, retort the wets. Wait and see what happens after we register public opinion.

California, bitter foe of prohibition due to its vineyards, and its big Latin population, is for the second time to consider a state measure for enforcing the Volstead Act. Two years ago such a law was passed by the legislature and was halted by referendum and killed at the polls. The next one enacted was held up by the referendum and is on the November ballot.

Election of 75 new congressmen favoring modification of the dry law will assure beer and light wines for America, say the heads of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

Candidates are being listed as to their views by both sides in the liquor fight. In places where both are drys the wets take no action, but in case both are wets the Anti Saloon League supports one favoring repeal of the Volstead Act rather than the one wanting modification.

They feel repeal of the law unlikely, modification possible.

The situation in several states where the fight has been strong follows:

NEW YORK: Results of primaries and party conventions making certain a New York Congressional delegation overwhelmingly favoring modification of the Volstead act. Senator Calder Republican and wet, seeks reelection against Dr. Copeland, Democrat, with a modification plank in his platform.

Wet forces say 31 Democratic candidates for Congress have declared themselves wet, and one dry; 26, Republicans answered WET and 9 DRY.

NEW JERSEY. Governor Edward I. Edwards, seeking senatorship on a wetter than the Atlantic platform, and Senator Frelinghuysen, dry, are fighting for the office on purely prohibition lines. Both the Anti-Saloon League and the wet organization are active. The elected congressional delegation is likely t obe about evenly divided. Election of Wm. N. Runyon, dry, as governor, seems assured.

PENNSYLVANIA: Western Pennsylvania with its big distillery and brewery properties, is the battleground which the Anti-Saloon League and the Council of Churches are fighting election of wet inclined congressmen.

Several big mass meetings have been held throughout the state recently, launching the drive for light wines and beer.

MISSOURI: The question of prohibition has made the present Senatorial race the bitterest in years. Senator James A. Reed, Democrat, seeks election as a declared wet. His opponent, R. R. Brewster, is for a change only if scientists say liquor can contain over one half of one percent alcohol without intoxicating powers. Aside from this, there is little other prohibition sentiment.

INDIANA: John Barleycorn died as a political issue here, but he came to life this fall. The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is carrying on a campaign with differing results. Jesse Sanders, running for congress on a wet platform, was beaten in the democratic primary. Joseph Turk, running for congress on the same platform was nominated.

An Anti-Saloon League poll of congressional candidates lists three democrats for light wine and beer, in addition to Turk.

COLORADO: Prohibition was eliminated as a campaign issue in Colorado at the primaries when the only two congressional candidates with wet planks were beaten. Colorado has been bone dry since 116, and no attempt to change the law has been started.

WISCONSIN: With renomination of Senator LaFollette, who was fought by the prohibitionists, the most of the other wet candidates for congress were chosen in Wisconsin primaries. The wets now claim control of seven of the eleven congressional districts and are going after the others.

A move to change the state prohibition law by legalizing stronger beer, is injecting the prohibition fight into election of state legislators.

MINNESOTA: Wet support of a pronounced dry as opponent of Congressman Volstead author of the prohibition law, is the outstanding feature of the campaign. 85 per cent of the legislature candidates are dry, the Anti-Saloon League declares, after a poll.

MARYLAND: One senator and at least three congressmen from Maryland will go to Washington pledged against prohibition. In three districts there are dry candidates opposing the wets(with the latter claiming victory.

Maryland is so wet politically that it was considered suicidal for any candidate to seek election under any Volsteadian banner. The wet candidates, therefore, make their issue the degree of personal wetness each can boast. The range is from favoring modification of the Volstead act to dripping wet.

Wets expect to make gains in Congress through the election results in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Maryland, Delaware, Ohio Wisconsin, Missouri and Kansas. They hope to gain from one to three wet votes each from Indiana and Michigan, with a totally wet delegation from Illinois.

Drys do not concede any such loss. Instead they contend that with the majority of people in favor of prohibition they will settle the question for keeps by sweeping into congress a still bigger majority opposed to the saloons.

UMPIRES PICK THE ALL-STAR NATIONALS; CHOICE OF ONLY THREE IS UNANIMOUS

By Billy Evans

In football when an expert decides to select an all-star or all-American eleven he goes to the football officials for advice.

No one connected with the gridiron game is better able to judge the worth of a player than the referee, umpire or field judge

On the same line of reasoning, in baseball the umpire should be very competent to pass judgment on the relative ability of the ball players.

In order to get a complete all star team from both the National and the American Leagues I got in touch with as many umpires as possible. The difference of opinion was rather surprising. In only a few cases did the umpires agree on the same player as the best at his respective position.

In the National League Rogers Hornsby, Dave Bancroft and Max Carey were the only three players who received the unanimous vote of the arbitrators.

In selecting Hornsby for second base all of them agreed that Frisch was so good that it was a very difficult matter to draw a line of distinction.

All the umpires said that Frisch deserved a place on the team. Several suggested that he be moved to third base where he would share honors equally with Groh. On the season's play they felt that Frisch was entitled to third base on the mythical team.

Groh's great work in the world series, and his fine showing late in the year earned much consideration for Heinie in passing out the honors.

THE PRICE OF PIECE

All-Star National League Team

Player	Position	Team
Schmidt	Catcher	Pittsburg
Rixey	Pitcher	Cincinnati
Cooper	Pitcher	Pittsburg
Donahue	Pitcher	Cincinnati
Reuther	Pitcher	Brooklyn
Daubert	First Base	Cincinnati
Hornsby	Second Base	St. Louis
Groh-Frisch	Third Base	New York
Bancroft	Shortstop	New York
E Meusel	Left Field	New York
Carey	Center Field	Pittsburg
Russell	Right Field	Pittsburg

The selection of Jake Daubert for first base is a fine tribute to that veteran. Several years ago Jake was pronounced all in. The umpires say that his work at first this year far surpassed the play of any other National League first sacker.

There was a wide difference of opinion as to the pitchers It is rather interesting that three of the four pitchers selected should be left handed.

In the outfield it was just as difficult to select a trio with the exception of Carey

Some of the arbitors favored Young of New York for right field, George Burns was also mentioned as an outfield possibility Bigbee of Pittsburg was well liked by several. Zach Wheat of Brooklyn was also favorably considered by many.

Bill Klem, in commenting on Red Russell, said he is one of the most valuable outfielders that has broken into the National League in years.

In former years Eddie Roush would have been a unanimous choice. This year he failed to qualify for a position while all the umpires conceded his greatness, they argued his late start handicapped his work, and his failure to sign may have cost the Reds a pennant. The selection of players was made on the value to their respective teams in 1922

An unusual fact about the selection was that none of the officials rated the great Alexander among the first four most valuable pitchers.

A few years back Alexander would have been first choice. Just another indication of how fleeting fame is in baseball
